UC may receive break on budget cut

If approved, universities would receive $50 million in savings

by Christine Strubel
Summer Bruin Staff

The state legislature approved today to give the University of California a break on its 1994-95 budget cut.

A $2 billion budget proposal for the Assembly and Senate this month, yet awaiting Senate approval and the governor's signature, the UC will receive an $88 million slash instead of $1.1 billion originally forecasted by Gov. Pete Wilson's January budget proposal.

"The $50 million in savings earmarked for specific areas registration fees and salary cuts, according to Michael Grantfield, vice chancellor of academic planning and budget.

The money will roll back the fee increase for 1993-94 from $95 to $60, and will decrease the across-the-board faculty and staff salary cut from 5 percent to 3.5 percent, he said.

Grad school initiative upsets staff

by Christine Strubel

University administration is proposing to restructure the School of Law and require faculty and staff members to come up with $3 million of the $4 million total cut. The move is seen as a major loss to the school, which has had the same dean for 15 years.

"The faculty were distressed by the way the administration considered staff unimportant to programs," said Ed Soja, associate dean, of the School of Architectural and Urban Planning.

"The faculty were the only ones who were affected by the cuts," he said. "We were told that we were told because we were the only ones who were affected by the cuts.

"It is clear that the cuts were not made because of the lack of support from the university."

Regents approve new retirement program

by Tram Nguyen
Summer Bruin Staff

In the third year of state budget cuts to the University of California, the Board of Regents approved a third version of an early retirement program for faculty and staff at June 17-18 meeting at UCLA. The new Voluntary Early Retirement Incentive Program (VERIP) expands upon incentives offered in past programs by increasing the age and years of service requirements for early retirement.

Indeed, VERIP EL, the plan attempts to attract "a meaningful number of retirees" who can increase payroll savings to the budget, said UC President Jack Peltason. The plan will take effect Nov. 1, 1995 for staff and July 1, 1994 for faculty.

While not an ideal solution to budget problems, the early retirement plan is "essential to avoid even more dramatic measures," Peltason said. By cutting expenses in the UC budget, early retirement programs can lessen the need for more faculty and staff layoff, he added.

To be eligible for early retirement, staff and faculty must acquire service and age credit. Early retirees receive three years of age credit and five years of service credit in calculating their pensions, which are equal to 6.5 percent of pay. In the two previous programs, the universities offered only five years of service.
Many patients opt for Chinese-style medicine

By Jennifer Dobbs
Grove Star-Telegram

Chinese medicine has made its mark in the United States for many years, and it continues to grow in popularity. At the same time, the practice is changing, evolving from traditional treatments to modern ones. This shift is being driven by patients who are looking for a holistic approach to their healthcare needs.

The shift towards Chinese medicine is not limited to traditional practices like acupuncture and herbal medicine. Many patients are seeking out Chinese medicine to treat chronic conditions such as asthma, arthritis, and diabetes. The use of Chinese medicine in these areas is growing as more people recognize its potential benefits.

It's important to note that Chinese medicine is not a one-size-fits-all solution. Each patient's journey is unique, and the treatment plan should be tailored to their specific needs. This is where medical doctors come in. They work alongside Chinese medicine practitioners to provide a more comprehensive approach to healthcare.

The popularity of Chinese medicine is not without its challenges. Many patients are seeking out Chinese medicine as a way to avoid traditional Western medicine. While this is understandable, it's important to remember that Chinese medicine should be used as a complement to, not a substitute for, Western medicine. Patients should always consult with their healthcare provider before making any changes to their treatment plan.

In conclusion, Chinese medicine is a growing trend in the United States, and it's important to recognize its potential benefits for chronic conditions. However, it's essential to approach this practice with a realistic and informed perspective, recognizing that it should be used in conjunction with Western medicine to provide the best possible care for patients.

Research team wins with mass transit plan

By Lisa Peter

After four rounds of research, a team of students and faculty from UCLA's Lewis Center for Transportation Policy and Planning has won a national competition for their plan to integrate electric vehicles into mass transit systems.

Electric cars are not cheap, and their use has increased in recent years. However, pollution caused by electric cars can be limited by using them at home. Researchers hope the plan they have put together today will lead to more electric cars in the future.

The team is now working on ways to integrate electric vehicles into mass transit systems. The plan is expected to be completed within a year.

Regarding Archie Kuminer and Sandor Grossman in their hard-hitting story, I thought it was a shame that their story was not in the national newspapers as well as the Los Angeles Times. It is important for people to be aware of the things that are happening at the University of California. The story that Kuminer and Grossman wrote was very well done and it is a shame that it wasn't in the national papers.

I also believe that it is important for the University of California to be held accountable for its actions. If the University of California is not held accountable, then they will continue to make decisions that are not in the best interest of the students and the university.

I also think that it is important for the University of California to have a system in place to ensure that the decisions that are made are fair and just. If the University of California does not have a system in place to ensure that the decisions that are made are fair and just, then the university will continue to make decisions that are not in the best interest of the students and the university.

The Bigger They Come, The Harder They Fall

"Action Hero" Rises too hard with no muscle

By Eric Olsen
Summer Beach Staff

I have a shiny new movie on my plate. The amount of Hollywood heat before it opens is proportionately high. Let's take a look at the latest "T.I.T.S."/"F&J." "Big boys always roll," say critics. "And now they're hot." In "Action Hero," Arnold Schwarzenegger, the star of the "T.I.T.S."/"F&J." phenomenon, plays a movie star capable of winning any movie to come his way.

The plot involves a group of young people who want to make it in the movie business. They decide to turn to Arnold to help them.

"We've been talking to Arnold," says one of the young people. "He's a great guy. He's got a lot of experience. He's been in the business for a long time."

Arnold, who has been a successful movie star for years, is not impressed. He tells the group that they need to work harder and smarter.

"You guys are dreaming," he says. "You need to get your act together."

The group is disappointed, but they are determined to try again.

Meanwhile, Arnold is struggling with his own career. He's not getting the attention he used to, and he's starting to wonder if he's still relevant.

"I'm not getting the recognition I used to," he tells his agent. "People don't want to see me anymore."

The agent assures him that it's just a slow burn. "Give it time. You'll come back on top."

Arnold decides to take a break from acting and spend some time with his family.

"I need to take a step back," he says. "I've been working too hard."

The group is grateful for Arnold's advice and determination.

"Thank you for helping us," they say. "We appreciate your time and effort."

But Arnold knows that it's just the beginning. He's not going to let the young people down.

"I'll be back," he says. "You guys can count on me."

Mass appeal fuels Schwarzenegger's film classics

By Danya Joseph
Summer Beach Staff

Arnold Schwarzenegger is known for his action star persona. Following a string of successful films in the '80s, he became a household name. His latest film, "Action Hero," is expected to be another box office success. The movie follows a group of young people who want to make it in the movie business. With Arnold's help, they hope to break into the industry.

"I'm always interested in new projects," Arnold says. "I want to keep exploring new roles."

The movie's success is also attributed to Arnold's dedication to his craft. He takes his acting very seriously and always puts in the time and effort to deliver a memorable performance.

"Arnold is a true professional," says one of the young people. "He brings a lot of energy to the set."
Seattle" recalls old fashioned movie romance

By Danny Joseph

Hanks, Ryan work well together in magical tale of hard-won love

Hanks, Ryan perfectly complement each other as the romance's wistful, adoring lovers. Their chemistry is natural and effortless, making the film a joy to watch.

In Seattle, Hanks plays a pipe-smoking oceanographer whose life is upended when his fiancée (Ryan) is killed in a car crash. Although devastated, Hanks's character, as played by Hanks, manages to keep a certain amount of cool even in the midst of tragedy.

Ryan's character, played by Ryan, is a writer who falls in love with Hanks's character. The two are drawn to each other by a shared sense of loss and longing. Their relationship is tender and genuine, with both actors bringing their A-game to the role.

The film itself is a beautiful love story, with a score that is both romantic and melancholy. The cinematography is stunning, with beautiful shots of the Pacific Northwest.

"Seattle" is a film that is not afraid to let its emotions show. It is a love story that is both uplifting and touching, with a message about the power of love to heal even the deepest wounds.

Deadly Threat gives power to voice of urban America

By John Lohse

King Tee described Deadly Threat on the album's final track as "a classic work on the streets, for the streets." And he means it.

The album's lead single, "Black Tarpets Again," had a 50s R&B feel and was produced by Seattle's rap group, 747.

Deadly Threat is a group of five rappers from Seattle, and their music is a blend of hip-hop and gangsta rap. The group is known for its raw, unfiltered style and its powerful messages about life in the streets.

"Deadly Threat" is a fitting title for the album, which is released on the west coast's own Def Jam Records.

Deadly Threat is not afraid to tackle tough issues, such as violence, poverty, and criminal justice. The group's music is a reflection of the struggles that many people in urban America face on a daily basis.

For fans of hip-hop, "Deadly Threat" is a must-listen. It is a powerful and unapologetic album that speaks directly to the realities of life in the streets.

Swimmers Drown

Anderson guides new Bruins through USAC

By Kate Anderson

So here you are, a new Bruin, a new student at UCLA. You’ve been admitted to this top-rated school, and you have no idea what you’re doing here or where you want to go. You’re probably worried about what to expect from high school and are excited about being in college and having a new adventure for yourself. You’re probably going to love your classes, but not sure that you’re going to find yourself.

Kate Anderson, the Director of the Human Resources Office, suggests that you look at the “Resource Guide” and “Campus Map” for your information. These can be found either in the administration building or on the UCLA website. They are also available in the Counseling Center.

Greenhalgh divulges some tips on Bruin life

By Rob Greenhalgh

You’ve read it all: the guidelines, the regulations, the requirements. It’s all in the back of your mind. You’ve heard about the different programs, the different clubs, the different departments. And you’ve heard about the different ways to get involved.

Rob Greenhalgh, a student at UCLA, offers some advice.

1. Join a club.
   - It’s a great way to meet new people and get involved in the community.
   - You can find clubs through the UCLA website or by asking around on campus.

2. Volunteer.
   - It’s a great way to give back to the community and meet new people.
   - You can find volunteer opportunities through the UCLA Volunteer Services program.

3. Attend events.
   - UCLA has a wide range of events throughout the year, from sports games to concerts to lectures.
   - You can find events through the UCLA Events Calendar or by asking around on campus.

4. Get involved in student government.
   - It’s a great way to get involved in the student community and make a difference on campus.
   - You can find information about student government through the UCLA Office of Student Affairs.

5. Take advantage of the resources available to you.
   - UCLA has a wide range of resources available to students, from the Counseling Center to the Library.
   - You can find information about these resources through the UCLA website or by asking around on campus.

“Getting involved in campus life is a great way to meet new people and get involved in the community,” Greenhalgh said. “It’s also a great way to get your feet wet and make the most of your time at UCLA.”

When Herb Caen stopped playing basketball three years ago, he founded his athletic department.

Caen, now a former UCLA basketball player, has always been a fan of athletics and loves to watch the games. But at UCLA, when many schools are offering a variety of classes, people often get excited about the sports.

"I knew UCLA was big and would have a lot of options," said Caen. "I would love to see people take a homeback riding class and things like that."

Herb Caen
Senior

The Department allows more than just basketball programs. The campus offers the Samuelson Recreation Center, which includes an Olympic-sized pool, diving well and shortage on 10-meter tower, the Molloy Aquatics Center, the first facility built in the United States for the new 10-meter tower, the basketball courts at the Wooden Center, the first facility built in the United States for the new 10-meter tower, the basketball courts at the Wooden Center, the first facility built in the United States for the new 10-meter tower, and the UCLA Provost's Office, which offers recreational and academic programs on campus.

The best way to experience UCLA athletics is the football season, which begins on Saturday, August 19th, and continues until the UCLA Bruins Football Bowl Championship. The season is divided into two parts, the fall and winter seasons, and is followed by the UCLA Bruins Basketball Bowl Championship.

While not in the student community, people might praise UCLA as one of the nation's best universities, but when it comes to sports, UCLA leads the way! UCLA's athletes are among the best in the nation, and the campus offers a variety of recreational activities for students.

During the past 23 years, the Bruins have compiled 69 NCAA titles, including 10 national championships in men's basketball. In 1992, the UCLA Bruins captured the NCAA title in men's basketball, and the Bruins are eyeing another title in 1993.

During the past 23 years, the Bruins have compiled 69 NCAA titles, including 10 national championships in men's basketball between 1964 and 1975.

The UCLA men's and women's volleyball teams can compete at the highest level, although the women currently have a strong tradition in college volleyball. The men's team has captured 12 NCAA titles since 1986, while the women have added six since 1990.

A year's tourist guide away from Pauley Pavilion, UCLA's Westwood campus, shows the men's and women's teams enjoying some of the strongest throwing squads in the country. UCLA Bruins have brought home more than 50 NCAA titles during the last 23 years, which means fewer world-class events that can be enjoyed at UCLA.

The dance department presents a cultural treat with its informal festi-Palisades in June, which features a series of international dance programs performed by UCLA students and faculty as well as guests from around the country. Tuba, a visiting dancer, will join the Faculty of Dance. CAMPUS EVENTS.

WE NEED INTERNS!

Campus Events is a close-knit office. It does not mean we are looking for any one particular type of person, in fact the contrary. This year’s staff is rich, middle class, poor; fashion conscious and anti-fashion; medium, exhibitionists; we have vegetarians and carnivores/omnivores; a tarot card reader; people that listen to opera, grunge, post-grunge, disco, house, Mah Mah; people who engage in scandals, truth or dare games; people who wish they were grades and scandals waiting to happen; people of color and white people; drunks and people who never touch the stuff; extreme left-wingers, liberals, and moderates; Christians, atheists, agnostics, Jews, Muslims (we’d love to improve this list); straight people, gay people, bisexuals, the blissfully undecided, celibates; quiet people, and loud people; north campus and south campus; kitchens and angels; geeks and gypsies; anti-grits (in a friendly way); feminists; revolutionaries; people who work out, and people who find it a vain waste of time; the unemployed; people who need vast amounts of attention; and people and lost people; critics and optimists; computer nerds and the computer illiterate and much much more.

Our community is working together and making friends. Toleration is very important. No matter who you are, there is a friendly welcome awaiting you in Campus Events. The ability to be accepting of others is the most important criteria needed to maintain the positive atmosphere we continue to enjoy. Therefore, you are either welcome or you may wish to reconsider applying. If, however, you celebrate diversity, or simply are sheltered, but are eager to learn and experience... then please apply!

Thank You For Your Interest.

Campus legends add interest to tours, eliminate past 'hazing'

At the foot of UCLA's Janss Steps, a group of freshmen-mourning campus candidates near each end to avoid walking on the sink.

Buried under the map line by former UCLA basketball player James, a UCLA orientation counselor-the group Students staring in the day, but more than a day away on campus, the counselors were.

The Haus Tour may be one of the many reasons UCLA orientation counselors still freshmen on campus.

But orientation counselors always plugged the meals about five years after several freshmen followed the advice.

Last fall, under the guidance of UCLA's House Lane Counselor, a UCLA orientation counselor told students to the university to keep students from feeling alienated by the university.

"Part of the purpose of orientation is to keep students from feeling alienated by the university," said Roxanne Young, orientation assistant counselor.

BROTHERTHOOD

A fraternity provides the opportunity for close-knit friends centered around common goals and pursuits of a fraternity.

ATHLETICS

You can become involved through established fraternity and intramural athletic competitions. These events create friendly and exciting competition as well as strengthening the internal ties within each fraternity.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

Assisting the community through individual and chapter-sponsored events serves as an important facet of fraternity life. Currently, UCLA fraternities have adopted homeless families through the Beyond Shelter Family and Friends Program.

How do you join?

The process for joining a "rushing" is quite simple. There is no cost involved in rush. Events such as orientation meetings, fraternity information fairs, and individual fraternity schedules are all free services provided by the ICC to assist you in the rush process. A question often asked is the expense involved in belonging to a fraternity. Surprisingly, the average total costs are well below residence hall or apartment living. So, see for yourself all the benefits fraternity life can offer.

SCHOLARSHIP

The all-fraternity GPA consistently ranks among the all-male GPA. A fraternity offers academic support through free course tutoring programs and rewards for academic achievement.

In the last two months, student activism has taken many forms, from the protests at the death of Rodney King to the debate over the debate. Mayors for Peace launched an anti-war campaign, and the local university events that affected UCLA in the last year. It seems to me that the activism is changing, and our students are getting more involved in the issues of the day. The following chronology of events shows the change in the nature of student activism over the last year.

The activism in the last year has been marked by the following events:

- Early September - After a 60-hour strike, the strike was called off. The students were able to get some of their demands met, including the replacement of the dean of the College of Letters, Arts and Sciences.
- October 2 - During a campus class, a student was detained by the police. The students then went on a 12-hour hunger strike, and the administration was forced to listen to their demands. The students were able to get the administration to meet with them.
- November 20 - The students held a rally to support the striking students at the University of California at Berkeley. The rally was attended by over 1,000 students, and the administration was forced to listen to their demands.
- December 5 - The students held a rally to support the striking students at the University of California at Berkeley. The rally was attended by over 1,000 students, and the administration was forced to listen to their demands.
- January 20 - The students held a rally to support the striking students at the University of California at Berkeley. The rally was attended by over 1,000 students, and the administration was forced to listen to their demands.

   - Allergic reaction to campers: If you're allergic to the animal, be sure to avoid it when camping or hiking.

6. Golf:
   - Golf balls: Use golf balls with a dimple pattern to reduce wind resistance.
   - Golf clubs: Choose clubs that are lightweight and easy to swing.

7. Boating:
   - Service dogs: If you have a service dog that helps you manage your allergies, be sure to bring it along on your trip.
   - Emergency kit: Always carry a well-equipped emergency kit with medications, medications, and other supplies.

Aquatic exercise now popular 'splash' course

By Robert Semonetti
USA Today

When it comes to exercise, more people have a pretty good reason to throw in the towel. They're tired of running on the treadmill, jumping on the rebounder or hitting the weight room. They're tired of the way it makes them feel physically and mentally. But they hate to lose.

Now, a new form of exercise that will make them drop to the floor in the coach's office is on the rise: water-aerobics.

For athletes, water-aerobics can be a new way to maintain or improve their fitness. For people without disabilities, it can be a good way to maintain or improve their fitness. For people who are athletically fit, it can be a good way to maintain or improve their fitness. For people who are not athletically fit, it can be a good way to maintain or improve their fitness.

Water-aerobics exercise is also an ideal workout for people who are temporarily disabled or recovering from an injury or surgery. The National Multiple Sclerosis Society endorses water exercise, and the American Heart Association also endorses water exercise. In fact, water is great for people with disabilities.

Have you ever loved a teacher?

Do you remember back when you first looked at your teacher and said "I want to grow up just like you." Right now there is a crisis, and it's happening right under our noses. Teachers are an important role model in a society where underprivileged children are groping for someone to look up to. The crisis is that there are so few individuals heading into the educational field, more importantly so few from underrepresented backgrounds.

Do you want to be a part of a new exciting program where you can:

* Work with inner-city children,
* Help make an impact on education, especially in the fields of science and technology,
* Promote diversified education.

November 5 -- Friday, and the end of a discussion about the relationship between the Panhellenic Council, the Associated Students of the University, the University of California Student Senate, and the effect that the multi-billion-dollar budget of the University system is having on the students of the University of Southern California.

November 16 -- In this last major issue of the 1982-83 academic year, the students of the University of Southern California faced a crucial decision: whether to support the President's budget or to vote for a student-run alternative. The student-run alternative was based on the principle that the budget should be controlled by the students, and that the President's budget was not in the best interests of the students.

State prisons bulge with repeat inmates

By Susan Swart
San Francisco Chronicle

On Tuesday night in the San Francisco Bay Area, Doris gets up from the bed she has been sleeping in for 20 nights. She has been in the county jail for 22 years, the longest that most people spend there. Doris, though not her real name, is a 48-year-old woman who was sentenced to 12 years in prison for armed robbery.

"I came in when I was 26," Doris says. "I've been here ever since." She has no idea when she will be released, but she hopes it will be soon. "I just want to go home and see my family again," she says.

Doris is one of thousands of women who are serving time in California prisons. The state has one of the highest female incarceration rates in the country, and the number of women in prison has more than doubled over the past decade.

"We've had people who have never been in jail before," says Doris. "They don't know how to deal with it. They don't know what to expect." She says she has learned a lot from the other women in her cell block, but she still feels isolated and alone much of the time.

"I feel like I'm living in a bubble," she says. "I don't have any contact with the outside world. I don't get to see my family or my friends. It's really hard to be here."

Japan, U.S. plan to resume trade talks

Tokyo — The United States and Japan will resume negotiations on a new comprehensive trade agreement, officials said Sunday, following the outset for President Clinton's meeting this week with the prime minister of Japan.

The Clinton administration has proposed a broad agreement, similar to one that was to be signed in 1995. The agreement was not signed because of a dispute over trade in textile products.

Japanese officials said they were optimistic about reaching an agreement this week, but they said they would not be able to make a decision until after the talks had been held.

American officials were not optimistic about the talks. They said the Japanese were not willing to make any concessions.

Germany's interior minister resigns

BERLIN — German Interior Minister Rudolf Scharping resigned Sunday over the government's handling of a death in Berlin, according to reports.

Scharping, a member of the Social Democratic Party, has been under fire for his handling of the case, which involved a young woman who died of a suspected drug overdose.

The government is expected to name a replacement within the next few days.

Haitian military chief to give Aristide power

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's military chief has offered to give President Aristide power as a way to resolve the country's political crisis.

The offer was made Sunday by Gen. Jacques Saboteur, who said he would be willing to serve as a mediator between the government and the opposition.

The offer was accepted by the opposition, which has been calling for Aristide's resignation.

U.S. might abandon Mideast peace talks

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is preparing to hold talks with Israel and Palestine to try to resolve the conflict in the Middle East.

The talks would be the first in three years, and they are expected to be attended by Secretary of State James Baker and President Clinton.

Study encourages pesticide reduction

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency has released a new study that suggests a reduction in the use of pesticides could help the environment.

The study, which was released last week, found that a decrease in the use of pesticides could help reduce the amount of water and soil contamination caused by the use of pesticides.

Democrats agree to new rental plan

ALBANY — Democratic Assembly leaders agreed Sunday to a new rental plan with a maximum of $2,000 for one-bedroom apartments and $4,000 for two-bedroom apartments.

The plan, which was approved by the Assembly, would replace the current system of rent control in New York State.

The Senate has discussed the issue of the University's budget, with many faculty members expressing concern over the lack of transparency in the decision-making process.

Professor John Smith, chair of the Senate Budget Committee, said, "The Senate has urged the administration to be more open and transparent in their decision-making process.
However, we have not received a satisfactory response from the administration.

Accordings: Music or threat to society

by Alan Fagan

You have a serious problem in this country, our nation is divided. Congress is gridlocked. The president is impeachment最好是．The Supreme Court is deadlocked. The people are frustrated.

The question is: How do you fix this? I suggest some solutions.

Firstly, there should be a "Department of Accordings," which would be responsible for promoting music to the public.

Secondly, there should be a "Department of Accordings," which would be responsible for promoting music to the public.

Lastly, there should be a "Department of Accordings," which would be responsible for promoting music to the public.

In conclusion, we need to address this problem before it becomes too serious. Thank you.

KROQ's Weenie Roast offers too few highs, too many hours

By Michael Herreras

Marathon rock concerts can create an opportunity for possibilities, possibilities, possibilities, endless possibilities in musical performances. They also have a prerequisite: All of the acts must be good, all of the acts must be good, all of the acts must be good.

"Toots and the Maytals" indeed was the "firstpengal show, and the band was so good, it stole the show from the main stage. Lead singer Eddy "The Chief" Grant was the show's focal point, with his powerful voice and infectious rhythm. The band's performance was a perfect blend of reggae, ska, and soca, with Grant's smooth vocals and the band's tight rhythm section.

Earth, Wind & Fire was the next act to perform, and their performance was just as impressive as the Maytals'. The band's soulful sound filled the air as they played their classic hits, "September" and "September". The crowd was completely captivated by their performance, and the band's energy was infectious.

But then the show took a turn for the worse. The next act, "Weezer" was just so-so. The band's performance was lackluster, and the fans were disappointed. The show's momentum was lost, and the crowd's enthusiasm waned.

The following acts, "Rancid" and "Less Than Jake" were just as good as the previous two acts, but they couldn't quite recapture the energy and excitement of the first two acts. The crowd was still engaged, but the show's overall impact was lessened.

The last act of the night was "Green Day", and their performance was a mixed bag. The band's lead singer, Billie Joe Armstrong, delivered a powerful performance, but the rest of the band's performance was less than memorable. The crowd was still engaged, but the show's overall impact was lessened.

In conclusion, the Weenie Roast had its moments, but overall, it was a disappointing show. The first two acts were outstanding, but the following acts just couldn't quite deliver the same level of excitement and energy. The show's overall impact was lessened, and the fans were left wanting more.

Israel accuses Syria of supporting attacks

BEIRUT — Syria was accused Sunday of supporting a new wave of guerrilla attacks in southern Lebanon, and senior officials warned that they would not let the Middle East peace talks derail them from resuming.

Senior Israeli Cabinet was expected to make a decision on military action as it weekly meeting on Sunday, severalermen suggested that steps would be taken now. News reports from Lebanon said that Israel had moved extra artillery into southern Lebanon and that the government was ready to respond to any guerrilla attack.

Clashes between the government forces and guerrilla attacks have been occurring periodically.

Crackdown on dissent suggested in China

BEIJING — In a signal that crackdown on dissent may be under way in Shanghai, the authorities have sentenced an outspoken activist to three years in a labor camp for "counterrevolutionary activities" and opening to foreign agents.

The sentence, coming after a series of nine other prisoners in Shanghai in the last six weeks, suggests that China may be using a harder line on dissent. The trend had been to release any political prisoners who were, in some cases, scolded by the Chinese government.

The activist, who was sentenced in Shanghai, is a former campaigner for democracy, was arrested in a labor camp in the Shanghai area that the authorities refused to disclose. He was Liu Ling, said on Sunday night in a telephone interview from his home in Shanghai. "I don't know what is happening," he said. "I am sitting in the prison and I don't understand what is happening.

Fox chairwoman blasts censorship

The issue of television violence quickly surfaced at a convention of TV critics when Fox Broadcasting chairman Steve Lyssy and Steve Tyler were frightened by a politically charged program that showed a number of violence and censorship.

"What about the so-called V-chip, a device that would be implanted in new television sets and controlled by parents or government," he said at the University of Illinois in the capital.

"That act, the very idea of the "-chip" scares me."

June 14 marks the last day of the 2009-10 session of the State Legislature, and the last day for Governor Pat Quinn to make good on his promise to sign into law a 'no backpay' bill that would ensure all retired public employees receive the same pay raises as active employees. At the beginning of the session, Governor Quinn pledged to support the 'no backpay' bill. The bill was fought by Republicans, who insisted on a measure that would only apply to new hires. Governor Quinn refused to accept these conditions, and in the end, the 'no backpay' bill was signed into law.

Clinton's plans raise economic costs

By Steven Greenhouse

WASHINGTON — Despite the president's recent decision to reverse his administration's stance on the economy and raise taxes, the administration is moving forward with plans to raise more money from the middle class, particularly through a tax on investment income.

Clintom's economic agenda is focused on reducing the federal deficit and boosting the economy. The president has said he will support a tax on investment income as part of his efforts to reduce the federal deficit.

The tax on investment income would be a significant step in that direction, the administration said. It would provide a source of revenue to help pay for the government's growing deficit.

The tax, which would be paid by individuals who have a net worth of more than $1 million, would be part of a broader package of tax increases the president plans to propose in his upcoming budget.

The package would also include increased taxes on high-income individuals and corporations, as well as a new tax on financial transactions.

The president's plan to increase taxes on investment income is likely to be met with resistance from Congress, which has already shown little interest in increasing taxes on the wealthy. But the president is eager to move forward with his agenda, and is expected to push for the tax on investment income in his budget.

Overworked staff ignores students

By Kevin Miron

I almost elapsed in chemistry. As I was listening to my chemistry teacher, I was also thinking about chemistry.
I was trying to figure out how to study for the test, which was due the next day. I was also thinking about how much I hated chemistry, and how much I wanted to donate my brains to a chemistry museum.

Finally, I walked out of the classroom, feeling exhausted. I realized that I had no idea what chemistry was, and that I had no idea how to study for it. I decided to take a walk, and when I returned, I found that I had accidentally put the wrong book on the desk.

I never did figure out how to study for chemistry, but I did manage to get an A in the course. I learned that sometimes, you have to accept that you don't understand something, and that it's okay to ask for help.

Chicana/o or show strength

By Ada Westoffe Ulloa

The Chicana/o or show strength, as the Augustaua Chicana/o or show strength (musical and artistic) book discusses, is more than a simple show of strength. It is a statement of identity, and a celebration of Chicana/o culture.

The book is divided into three sections: the musical, the artistic, and the written. The musical section features a variety of songs, from traditional Chicana/o music to contemporary pieces. The artistic section includes photographs, paintings, and sculptures, all created by Chicana/o artists. The written section features essays and poetry, written by Chicana/o writers.

The book is a powerful reminder of the strength and resilience of Chicana/o people, and a tribute to their contributions to culture and society.

Bloody war rage beyond Mayan pyramids

By Hugo Zeniga

Since 1954, when a CIA agents began assassinating communist leaders in Guatemala, the country has been in a state of civil war. This war has claimed the lives of thousands of innocent people, and has caused great suffering to the Mayan communities in the country.

The Mayan communities are located in the highlands of Guatemala, and are known for their rich culture and tradition. However, these communities have been persecuted by the Guatemalan army, which has used violence to suppress their voices and their beliefs.

The situation today is no better, as the Guatemalan army continues to attack the Mayan communities, causing great suffering and loss of lives.

The world must unite to support the Mayan communities and to bring an end to this cruel war.

Thursday was 7/12, another night at the Hollywood Bowl. Sure, the gargantuan playground-crowd was there, but there was a spirited crowd as well, through the doors, who had come to see 12-year-old phenom Sarah Chang.

The Philadelphia-born Chang, whose prodigious talents first lured around the demands of her 12-year-old, she has been armed with her violin for the past six years.

During her lifetime, young career, she has met challenges after challenges. Chang is the youngest person ever to win the concert version. Orchestras, and was awarded the Younghans prize for the promising young person.

She walked onto the stage in a beautiful, yellow-lingo dress looking more like Shirley Temple than Inzhuk Perlman.

Iattish School in New York City received the 7/12 award, the highest award music can receive, and she has already returned to the stage on EML records titled "Debut".

With such an illustrious record, it’s easy to forget that Chang is only 12 years old. The child prodigy has already played with some of the best-known names in the business.

Throughout the crowd, muzak and music of "when I was 11 I didn’t even know what a violin was" could be heard.

After winning a four-set thriller over the Americans in the opening game of their home-and-home series, Brazil kept to its winning form in a dominant 3-0 victory over the Yankees. The match was played in the Rose Bowl, home to the UCLA Bruins.

The Bruins, led by setter Mike Sealy, took the first set 25-21, but Brazil came back with a vengeance in the second set, winning 25-14. In the final set, the Yankees battled back to tie the score at 13-13, but Brazil held off the Americans to win 25-19.

Tenth campus search resumed

Peltason cites reduced UC budgetary threat

By Vince Galla

The search for a new chancellor of UCLA has resumed after a brief lull, following the recent announcement of a slight reduction in the University of California's budget.

Even though the University of California Board of Regents has yet to finalize the search process, the university has already started soliciting applications and interviews.

The search committee is composed of faculty members from both the UCLA campus and other UC campuses, as well as representatives from the California Department of Education and the California State University system.

Although the university's budget is still uncertain, Peltason said that the reduction in the UC budget would likely have a minimal impact on the search process.

The search committee will continue to meet and make decisions on the selection of the new chancellor. The UCLA campus community is encouraged to participate in the search process by providing feedback and suggestions.

Technique clears eyes with lasers

By Jane Doe

After 20 years, Michael Kohn finally took a step forward in his quest to clear his vision. Kohn, who has undergone keratorefractive surgery (KRS), has been able to see clearly again.

Kohn, a former UCLA police officer, underwent KRS surgery in 1990 and has since been able to see without glasses or contact lenses. He says the procedure has been life-changing.

I can't believe how good it feels to see clearly again," Kohn said. "I never thought I would be able to see without glasses or contact lenses."
Gay man reinstalled to LAPD after litigation

By Stephanie Bivens

Los Angeles Daily News

Mitchell Goldstein, who argued a high-profile case against the Los Angeles Police Department over affirmative action, was reinstalled as a LAPD officer effective Monday. He was reinstalled after being taken off duty last year and finding himself unable to return to the department.

The 23-year-old Los Angeles native became the seventh gay police officer in the city after his reinstatement was announced Monday morning by the Los Angeles Police Protective League.

"I think we've accomplished all the goals and cleared the last step in a long legal battle," said Goldstein.

"Right now there is no blanket to stop me."

"I survived 3½ years without backup and operating with the threat of death constantly."

— Mitchell Goldstein

"I want that under Chief William that won't be tolerated."

— Mitchell Goldstein

Goldstein, a protege of LAPD vice president, was reinstated in 1986 after a brilliant legal battle that he and two other officers were denied from the force by harassment and discrimination, according to officials.

He had a similar action against the city of Los Angeles, and something was made on him."

— Mitchell Goldstein

He was reinstated after his reinstatement was announced Monday morning by the Los Angeles Police Protective League.

"It will be paid between $5,000 and $100,000 severance plus at LAPD wages, as an increase in his base compensation of $16,500, plus $1,000 per month for 12 years," said Goldstein.

"Having to return to work as a police officer in San Francisco, not being able to go to work in this city, has been an incredible burden."

Panels discuss African, African-American cultural gap

by Wendy Garcia

Visiting the need for cultural understanding andued to African culture in African-American communities, the conference, held in Ashburn, Va., was jointly hosted by the League of Potomac Heights and the Black Family Support System. "As African-Americans in the Diaspora, we face a unique challenge," said Dr. Joe Williams, special assistant to the UCLA Center for African Studies Center. "We have been away from our communities for various reasons, and we need to find a way to reconnect with our culture and the African-American community."

Various panels were held to address the cultural gap, including discussions on African culture and its influence on African-American communities. The event concluded with a keynote address by John Williams, who discussed the importance of understanding African culture in order to bridge the cultural gap.

Biological basis for sexuality debated

By Natalie Angier

In the sharp debate over the significance of sexual orientation, the scientific community has been divided over whether biology or environment plays a larger role. Those who believe in a biological basis for orientation point to the biological mechanisms and processes that underlie the differences, while those who believe the environment plays a greater role point to the social, psychological, and cultural factors that influence behavior and identity. The debate has important implications for our understanding of human nature and the rights of individuals who identify as gay, lesbian, or transgender.

Some gay rights leaders view the latest findings as simple-minded and potentially dangerous. "Scientists, scientists are looking for the simple-minded and potentially dangerous," said one gay rights leader. "But there's no scientific evidence that biology is the sole determining factor. People are born with different orientations, and their environment shapes how they behave. We need to ensure that laws protect everyone's rights and rights are not eliminated by this latest research."

precise, every eye muscle and tear differently. "Everyone, especially men and women, is different," he says. "We can't make a generalization, normal eye procedures are not a guarantee. If we succeed in improving everyone's vision, then we have won."

The basic premise behind refractive surgery is to restructure the eye to reduce or eliminate the need for glasses, either temporarily or permanently. This is accomplished in various ways, depending on the specific procedure. The most common procedure of this kind is LASIK (laser-assisted in situ keratomileusis), in which a laser is used to reshape the cornea. This is often done in association with PRK (photorefractive keratectomy), a procedure that uses an excimer laser to create a thin layer of the cornea that is then removed with alcohol.

The Federal Trade Commission has been investigating the eyelid surgery market, which includes procedures such as blepharoplasty, dermabrasion, and laser treatments. These procedures are often performed by plastic surgeons, ophthalmologists, and optometrists.

The relationship between homosexuality and sexual orientation is still unclear. Some studies suggest that people who are homosexual are more likely to have certain personality traits, such as being more open to new experiences or having a higher degree of empathy. However, other studies have not found any consistent differences between heterosexual and homosexual individuals.

The most common assumptions about homosexuality are that it is innate and unchangeable. However, research has shown that this is often not the case. For example, some studies have found that people who were raised in an environment that was hostile to their sexual orientation were more likely to experience difficulties in their relationships.

Bruins: get involved

By Michele “Kiki” Kroslovich

Would you like to change the world? Then you need to get involved in your community. Whether you are concerned about environmental issues, social justice, or education, there are numerous opportunities to volunteer and make a difference.

I recently heard about a group of students who organized a picnic on the beach to promote awareness of the effects of pollution on marine life. They set up tables with information about the harmful effects of plastic waste and provided recycling bins for participants to take home.

Another group of students is working to create a community garden in the area. They are planning to plant vegetables and herbs that can be shared with local food banks and soup kitchens.

There are also many opportunities to volunteer through the campus organizations. For example, the Inter-Faith Council sponsors a weekly food drive, and the Book Exchange allows students to donate gently used textbooks to those in need.

Get involved in your community and make a difference. Together, we can create a better world for all.

Staff gets the shaft again

By Agha Ali

The staff at UCLA has seen a new round of layoffs on campus. One of the smallest departments of the university, the Staff and Faculty Services (SFS) Union, announced that it would be cutting 12 key positions in the department. This move is the latest in a series of layoffs and budget cuts that have hit the university in recent months.

The SFS union represents a small group of employees who work in non-academic areas of the university, including human resources, payroll, and financial aid. The union has been working to negotiate better pay and conditions for its members, but the university has so far refused to budge.

The union is expected to announce more layoffs in the coming weeks, as the university continues to struggle with budget deficits. The layoffs are expected to affect a wide range of employees, including administrative staff, groundskeepers, and food service workers.

In a statement following the announcement, the union's president, Agha Ali, said, “We are deeply disappointed by this move. Our members are dedicated and hard-working, and they deserve better treatment from the university.”

The union has called on the university administration to reverse its plans and to engage in meaningful negotiations with the union to improve working conditions and pay for its members.

Congress speaks out on School of Public Health

By Letter to Jack Pelton

We were disappointed to learn of the recent actions taken by the UCLA School of Public Health (SAPH). The school has cut back on many of its programs and services, including public health education and research. This is a serious setback for public health and the people who depend on it.

SAPH has a long history of excellence in public health research and education. It has been a leader in the field, producing many groundbreaking studies that have helped to shape public health policy. The school has also been a catalyst for innovation, pushing the boundaries of what is possible in public health.

We urge you to take action to support SAPH and to ensure that it can continue to do its important work.

Even in the best of families

By Leslie Damski

Drew was a bright boy. He had his fair share of troubles, but he was generally well liked by those who knew him. His family was supportive of him, and they tried to help him in any way they could. But in the end, it was not enough.

Drew was killed in a car accident at the age of 18. His family was devastated. They had hoped for a happy future, but now they were left to deal with the pain of losing their son. It was a time of great sadness and loss, but also of love and support.

The family raised money for a scholarship in Drew's name, and they continue to keep his memory alive. They are grateful for the support they received from their community, and they are determined to make a positive difference in the world.

As we mourn the loss of a wonderful young man, we are reminded of the fragility of life and the importance of cherishing every moment. We must remember to love and support each other, even in the best of families.

Acts bring 'Pericles' to local coffee houses

Dr. Lawrence Bollman, Summer Bruin Staff

Summer Bruin, July 21, 1993

Dr. Lawrence Bollman presents a new coffeehouse performance series: Shakespeare au lait. The series began with "Pericles" on July 19 and will continue through July 30 at various local coffee houses. The series is presented by UCLA Student Theatre and Shakespeare au lait.

"Pericles" is one of the plays' most occasionally performed versions of the "Third World Theater." After dedicating six weeks to long evenings of internal, the opening act is a rearrangement of the play's original, and the audience hears a different perspective on the audience's perception of the play.

Dr. Bollman acknowledges the incompleteness of her activity, warns that it is more and less frequently observed. As she speaks, other members of the cast help themselves to coffee and napkin sets following the performance. The audience is always aware of the ending, but the performance is not.

"Pericles" is the first of a series of three plays, and it is the only one performed in its entirety. The audience is aware of the ending, but the performance is not.

Award winning script gives writer big break

Tommy M. Thomson

"The Magic of Chance" is the first professional engagement of the UCLA Film School students' "How to be a Billionaire" production. The production opens tonight with a performance at the UCLA Bruin Theatre. The play is an adaptation of the popular book "How to be a Billionaire" by Robert Cialdini, a professor of psychology at the University of Arizona.

The play is set in a coffeehouse in New York, where the audience is asked to imagine what it would be like to be a billionaire. The play focuses on the character of "The Billionaire," who is portrayed by a cast of actors who have no previous acting experience.

The play is directed by the students of the UCLA Film School, who are working on their final projects. The production is sponsored by the UCLA Film School and the UCLA Bruin Theatre.

The play is a comedy and a satire of the "American Dream." The characters are from all walks of life, and they are all trying to get their share of the "Billionaire's" money. The play is a social commentary on the economic system and the ways in which it affects people's lives.

The play is a success, and it is receiving critical acclaim. The performance is scheduled for the entire month of August, and tickets are available at the Bruin Theatre box office.

"Romeo and Juliet" by William Shakespeare

Theatre Company presents "Romeo and Juliet"

It's free. It's a good cause

The love that should have blazed through the hearts of Romeo and Juliet remained unrequited in the minds of the audience at the Malvern Public Library last night. Joan Stuart Morris makes a winning appearance as the feisty and impulsive Juliet, while Tim Pellegrini is quite effective as her love interest, Romeo. A faster paced performance is perhaps a need. But after an hour, the show ends and there is no encore.

Now about the music. Show is bright and lively, made even more so by the fact that some of the cast members are also musicians. Unfortunately, the music is not as good as the acting. The orchestra plays well, but their efforts are not enough to save the show from the overall mediocrity.

Guard Palomino transfers to Vandy

By Stephanie Smith

The women's basketball program is in a state of transition. First, the departure of head coach Bill McCollum. Then, a few weeks ago, the switch of sophomore guard Tyler Palomino.

The 5-foot-9 guard announced recently her decision to transfer to Vanderbilt University, where she will play for the Commodores next season.

"I'm excited to join the Commodores," said Palomino. "Vanderbilt offers a great opportunity for me to continue my basketball career and develop my game."
Only a mom loves 'em

By Robyn Nelson

The telephone bell rings. "Mom, don't hang up," says a voice out of the blue, which is odd since you didn't realize you were calling your mother. She faces you and, perhaps, asks you, "What's wrong? We're not talking about that, are we?"

Yes, I suppose it's a radar system. Something that's been programmed to do that. I'm sure phoners have done that before. Perhaps people have done that before. Perhaps people have done that before."

But, you think, "What's wrong? We're not talking about that, are we?"

Just a reminder from someone who's not around. It's just an example of how a mom can love you 'em."

UCLA Med Center rated best in western U.S.

By Jordan Garneck

UCLA Medical Center, ranking among the country's top medical centers, is among the nation's best. It is also one of the nation's most innovative institutions.

In fact, UCLA was recently named one of the top 10 hospitals in the nation by U.S. News & World Report, a publication based in New York City. The ranking is based on a comprehensive evaluation of the nation's top hospitals, which is conducted annually.

"The UCLA Medical Center ranks among the top 10 hospitals in the nation, making it one of the nation's most innovative institutions," said Dr. Raymond Schultze, director of the UCLA Medical Center.

"Part of the reason for UCLA's high ranking is its commitment to innovation." Schultze added. "We are constantly looking for new ways to improve patient care and outcomes."
Deliver delivery of signatures delays smoking ban

Thousands campaign to force citywide vote on ordinance

By Kathleen Stowe
Los Angeles Daily News

A smoking ban in Los Angeles remains one of the city's most controversial issues, as the city continues to be divided over the merits of such a ban.

The major factors contributing to this controversy are the varying opinions among the public, the political landscape in Los Angeles, and the potential impact on the local economy.

The ban seeks to regulate smoking in Los Angeles, with the goal of improving the health of its residents and reducing the negative effects of second-hand smoke. However, there are concerns about the impact of such a ban on businesses and the local economy.

Supporters of the ban argue that it will improve public health and reduce the health care costs associated with smoking-related illnesses. They argue that allowing smoking in public places will lead to increased exposure to second-hand smoke, which can be harmful to both smokers and non-smokers.

Opponents of the ban, on the other hand, argue that it will have a negative impact on businesses, especially those that rely on smoking customers, such as bars and restaurants.

The ban has been on the ballot twice, with each attempt failing to gain enough signatures to qualify for the ballot. The latest attempt is expected to be voted on in the near future.

If the ban passes, it will be one of the most restrictive smoking bans in the country. It will prohibit smoking in indoor public places, including restaurants, bars, and workplaces. It will also prohibit smoking in certain outdoor areas, such as parks and schools.

The ban has faced opposition from various groups, including the California Restaurant Association and the California Retailers Association.

The ban has also faced legal challenges, with opponents arguing that it violates the state constitution's provision for the freedom of assembly.

If the ban passes, it will be watched closely by other cities considering similar legislation. However, it remains to be seen whether the ban will be successfully implemented and enforced.

The impact of the ban on the local economy is also a concern. Opponents argue that it will lead to a decrease in business and job losses.

Despite the challenges, the ban remains a priority for many public health advocates in Los Angeles. They argue that it is necessary to protect the health of all residents and reduce the negative effects of smoking.

The ban has also faced opposition from some members of the City Council, who argue that it is unnecessary and would be too costly for businesses.

The upcoming vote on the ban will be closely watched by the public and the business community. It remains to be seen whether the ban will pass and how it will be implemented if it does.

In the meantime, the city continues to grapple with the issue of smoking and its impact on public health.

Underground explosions planned in search for faults

By Dennis Widders
Los Angeles Daily News

In an effort to forestall and mitigate faults like the one responsible for the deadly 1971 Sylmar, Calif., earthquake, the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power plans to set off a series of underground explosions, in an effort to weaken those faults in northern Los Angeles.

"We will help the governor and the water district do what they deem necessary," said John F. Menendez, president of the Los Angeles River Development Authority.

The blasts will be set off in the area sometime during the next two years, the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power said. The explosions, in an effort to weaken those faults in northern Los Angeles, will be set off in an area that includes the city's 17-mile-long water system.

Defend yourself against white supremacists

By Adriana Manjarrez

The recent attacks on immigrant students—just one of the many instances of white supremacy—are a clear indication of the need for action. It is time for individuals and groups to stand up against this injustice.

In the face of such aggression, we must not remain silent. We must act to protect our communities and support those who are under attack.

To do this, we must first understand the root causes of white supremacy. It is a systemic issue that is perpetuated by many agencies, both federal and local. By acknowledging this, we can begin to address the problem at its source.

We must also work to create a more inclusive society. This means supporting organizations that work to combat white supremacy, as well as educating ourselves and others about the importance of diversity and inclusion.

Finally, we must stand together as a community to support one another. We must be there for those who are being targeted, and we must work to create a safer and more equitable future for all.

Together, we can make a difference. Let us stand against white supremacy and work towards a more just and equitable society.

UCLA Film Archive shows retrospective on Greek film

By Francis Peep

Many people enjoy the power of the classics, but the viewing of Greek films is not one of them. Perhaps the reason for this is that the films themselves are not as well-known or as highly regarded as the classics of other countries. However, the UCLA Film Archive is here to change that.

The Archive has recently launched a retrospective on Greek film, showcasing some of the best-known and most influential films from the country. The retrospective includes films from the early days of cinema, as well as more recent works.

One of the films that stands out is "The Greek Passion," directed by Yorgos Lanthimos and released in 2015. The film tells the story of a young man who becomes involved with aglas woman, and the consequences of their relationship. The film was nominated for several awards at the Oscars, and it has been praised for its powerful performance and its exploration of themes like love and mortality.

Another film that is included in the retrospective is "The Cretan Sea," directed by Melina Mercouri and released in 1975. The film tells the story of a family that is forced to flee their home during the Greek Civil War, and it is praised for its powerful portrayal of the effects of war on individuals and families.

In total, the retrospective includes 20 films from the past 120 years, ranging from the silent era to the present day. The Archive hopes that this exhibition will help to increase awareness of the rich and diverse film culture of Greece, and that it will inspire more people to explore the films for themselves.

The retrospective on Greek film is now on display at the UCLA Film Archive, located on the campus of the University of California, Los Angeles. It is open to the public and admission is free. For more information, please visit the UCLA Film Archive's website.

L.A.'s problem? We're searching for heroes that aren't around

Zach Aron

If you take a good look at the L.A. Sparks' situation, you'll come up with one major conclusion: Los Angeles doesn't have any heroes.

Except for the Kings Stanley Cup run and the Olympics, Los Angeles hasn't even come close to putting together a championship team. Dodger and Angel fans always feel like they're in the thick of it, and that was considered an accomplishment. The Dodgers, who have only been the best since 1981, have been playing championship baseball since the early 1960s, and that's a big part of the National League. And you can only say that L.A. is becoming a Mickey Mouse area.

Now you could say that the current L.A. team is just a record, and that's because every statistic has aoric on the first day of the new season. You could also say that we have a great baseball player in the pitching of our Southern California teams, but that's because every statistic has aoric on the first day of the new season. You could have a great baseball player in the pitching of our Southern California teams, but that's because every statistic has aoric on the first day of the new season.

No, not our home team. In fact, there are not even one person who backs up from a Los Angeles sports team who could be called "great." Not one major league player can be considered "great," not even on the Angels. Our team has no heroes, and that's why there are no more championship teams.

But with the mold now having been set, the Los Angeles Dodgers have been playing championship baseball since the early 1960s, and that's a big part of the National League. And you can only say that L.A. is becoming a Mickey Mouse area.

They could be considered good, if the Olympic motto is your goal for the future.

More Bruins medal internationally

UCLA track star Ogden, Blunt, Ablow show well again, this time at the Pan American Games.

By Tim Caskie

UCLA freshman shotputter Ogden, east-coast medallist at the World University Games in Nagoya, Ontario, Canada last team, is now another star for the Bruins, according below his season best.

Blunt managed only three and one-half years at the national level, while the top three or the world’s best, but with his 27.5-meter performance last week, Ogden ranks apparently kept Ogden any of his 33.91 and 34.84.

"A long surprise," UCLA throwing coach Art Vegarone said of Ogden's Saturday performance.

The 17-year-old junior from Walla Walla, Wash., was 31st at the 1987 World Youth Championships in the 38.5-meter category.

"He had throwers that would have won the meet by three or four feet, but he was feeling them. But second place is no disgrace. The kid had a good year."

Ogden already has been presented about football, but he said he didn't think that affect his performance.

"(Ogden) has gotten in the habit of being a little more sticky than he was," said "He didn't want to think about not doing it."

The Bruins finished third in the tournament, with 32 points, behind the Soviet Union and the United States. UCLA's Tracey C. Brown said, "It's been a great finish."

Less violence urged in media productions

By Paul Harvey
Los Angeles Daily News

The major organizations in the entertainment industry, from networks and studios to moviemakers, have all said they’re concerned about violence in their product. But one of the most powerful non-profit groups dedicated to making movies and television less violent is Hollywood’s own. The Children’s Defense Fund has launched a campaign to bring attention to the problem and to encourage the industry to take steps to reduce violence in its product.

In addition, the group was awarded a $50,000 donation from the California Film Commission. The $50,000 is intended to help fund the Children’s Defense Fund’s efforts to reduce violence in movies and television. The Children’s Defense Fund has also released a new report, “Screening for Violence,” which examines the impact of media violence on children.

The report found that children who watch violent images are more likely to be aggressive and to have difficulty controlling their behavior. The report also found that children who watch violent images are more likely to have trouble with peers and to have trouble with school.

The report recommended that the industry take steps to reduce violence in its product, such as making sure that violence is not the primary focus of a movie or TV show. The report also recommended that the industry work with organizations like the Children’s Defense Fund to develop guidelines for reducing violence in movies and television.

The Children’s Defense Fund has also launched a campaign to encourage parents to talk to their children about violence in movies and television. The campaign includes a website, www.violenceinmedia.org, where parents can find resources to help them talk to their children about violence.

Correction

In the December 2, 1988, issue of the “Daily Bruin,” a story was published about the Children’s Defense Fund’s efforts to reduce violence in movies and television. The story included a quote from a spokesperson for the Children’s Defense Fund that read, “We believe that the entertainment industry should do more to reduce violence in its product.”

The spokesperson did not work at the organization for the Children’s Defense Fund. The spokesperson was actually a spokesperson for the entertainment industry’s lobby group, the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers.

U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher, scheduled to leave Washington for Geneva on Monday, called for a "credible" peace effort and asked both sides to "commit to the goals of the Middle East Peace Process." Conflicting signals sent on smog control

The White administration has sent a series of conflicting signals last week to Southern California air quality officials on the merits of its new antismog program that emphasizes education and strict curfews on emissions.

The White House is acting "staged" in the smog fight because of its internal opposition.

AGM officials, who said that they have been persuaded by two years of clean air budgets that emphasize education, criticized the decision to apparently change the position.

Rap's treatment of women coming under fire

By Roland Martin

Latin pop star Jennifer Lopez has a hit on her hands with "If You Had My Love" and "Let's Get Loud," two songs that feature the star's powerful vocals. The songs have topped the charts in many countries, and Lopez is being hailed as a modern-Day Minnelli. However, some critics are expressing concerns about the lyrics and the message they convey.

Lopez's songs have been praised for their catchy hooks and upbeat rhythms, but they also contain lyrics that some feel are objectifying women. In "If You Had My Love," Lopez sings about wanting to be with a man who is young, rich, and famous. In "Let's Get Loud," she encourages listeners to dance and party.

Lopez has been a vocal advocate for women's rights and has spoken out about the need for greater representation of women in the media. However, some feel that her recent songs fall short of her previous work.

Lopez's manager, Benny Medina, said that the singer is aware of the criticism and is working to address it. "We understand the concerns, and we want to make sure that our music is respectful and empowering for all people," he said.

Lopez's upcoming album, "J.Lo," is expected to be released later this year. The album features collaborations with stars such as Lady Gaga and Pitbull.

Michelle Fields, a former White House correspondent, has been fired from her job as a White House correspondent for the New York Times. Fields, who had been a White House correspondent for the Times since 2006, was fired after she wrote an article for an online news site that was critical of President Donald Trump.

Fields' article, "The Art of the Deal," was published in the New York Times Magazine in 2016. The article was based on interviews with Trump and his advisors and detailed how they were able to secure deals.

Fields' firing has sparked a debate about the role of the press in covering the White House and the responsibilities of journalists.

"There was no communication between the people that did the research and people within the industry," said Fields.

Mandy Kelly

"I thought it was going to be a big deal," said Kelly, who was a former employee of the White House.

Kelly said that she was surprised by the firing and that she had not received any prior warnings. "I thought I was doing my job, and I was being told that I was doing a good job," she said.

Kelly said that she was disappointed that the firing was not handled more professionally.

"I was told that I was being replaced by someone who was going to be a better fit," she said.

Kelly's firing has sparked a debate about the role of the press in covering the White House and the responsibilities of journalists.

Leland Kim

The Mayans had a saying: "It is not the act, but the act of loving that is sin." This has always been my mantra. But I think the policy is flawed. The policy is ambiguous and allows for interpretation. It fails to address the root cause of the problem, which is the denial of equal rights and opportunities to gay and lesbian individuals. The policy is also discriminatory and violates the Constitutional guarantee of equal protection under the law.

Leland Kim, a former Scientologist, has called for the policy to be changed. He argues that the policy is not only unfair, but also violates the rights of gay and lesbian individuals. He believes that the policy should be changed to one that is more inclusive and supportive of all individuals, regardless of their sexual orientation.

SINFEST "REALLY WIERD"

Tatsuya Ishida

It is ironic that we are now discussing the policy in the context of the policy itself. The policy is not designed to protect the rights of gay and lesbian individuals, but rather to discriminate against them. It is a policy that is based on fear and ignorance, and it is a policy that is unfair and unjust.

The policy is also a violation of the Constitution. It is a policy that is based on discrimination and segregation, and it is a policy that is unsupported by any legal precedent. It is a policy that is based on fear and ignorance, and it is a policy that is unfair and unjust.

Kevin Mireles

Kevin Mireles is a former Scientologist who has been active in the movement for gay and lesbian rights for many years. He is a strong advocate for the policy, and he believes that it is essential for the protection of gay and lesbian individuals. He argues that the policy is based on a solid foundation of legal precedent, and that it is necessary for the protection of all individuals.

The policy is based on the Constitution, and it is supported by a solid foundation of legal precedent. It is a policy that is based on the rights of all individuals, and it is a policy that is fair and just.

Ex-porn star kisses old career goodbye...sort of

By Walden

The former adult film star of the 1970s, Sabrina Tansey, has made an unexpected comeback. The 58-year-old actress, who was known for her raunchy roles in the adult film industry, has returned to the spotlight with a new movie.

Tansey's first film in over 30 years, "The Return," was released last Friday. The movie is a drama about a woman who is trying to rebuild her life after a tragic event.

"The Return" has received mixed reviews, with some critics praising Tansey's performance and others calling it a disappointment.

"It's a shame that Sabrina had to make a comeback like this," one critic wrote. "She's still got it, but it's a shame she had to go back to that kind of stuff."

Others have been more positive, noting that Tansey's performance is one of the highlights of the movie.

"Sabrina's acting is excellent," another reviewer said. "I was actually moved by her performance in this movie."

Tansey's return to the screen has been met with both excitement and controversy. Many have questioned whether she should have made a comeback at all, given her past experiences.

"I think she should have just let things be," said one fan. "She's a talented actress, and she deserves better than that."

Others have been more supportive, noting that Tansey has always been known for her bold and unapologetic performances.

"She's not afraid to take risks," said another fan. "I admire that about her. She's always been a pioneer in the adult film industry, and I think she deserves another chance."

The movie is currently playing in theaters across the country, and it's sure to be a topic of discussion for weeks to come.

Wild 'Hold Me' delivers '90s screwball romp with dark comedy

By Walden

The directorial debut of Joel Hershman, "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me," is a delightfully dark and twisted '90s screwball romp. The movie follows two unlikely lovers as they navigate the world of Hollywood and the music industry in the '90s.

Hershman's film is a warning to those who think love is easy. There are no happy endings in "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me," and the movie's bleak tone is balanced by a strong performance from lead actress Diane Schuur.

"Diane Schuur is a delight to watch," said one critic. "She brings such depth and emotion to her performance that it's hard to look away."

The film's supporting cast includes a mix of established actors and up-and-coming talent, including Orville Brum and Mike Tansey.

"The supporting cast is wonderful," said another reviewer. "I was surprised by how much depth and nuance they added to the movie."

While "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me" may not be for everyone, those who are willing to embrace its dark humor and bold storytelling will find it to be a unique and enjoyable film.

San Diego State's Faulk doesn't run for cover during off-season

By Samantha Stevenson
The San Diego Union

SAN DIEGO — If frequent flyer status was any yardstick,
Michael Faulk's been busier than many other college running backs. In addition to getting ready for the Aztecs' first season in the Big West and the coming search for a new coach, Faulk's been on the road a lot talking about football, his new next-door neighbor and the cross-country trip he made to

Faulk headed south in late and this week Faulk made a surprise appearance at the Aztec's Super Bowl party. The party was held at the Atrium in downtown San Diego and was open to the public.

"It's pretty cool," Faulk said after the party. "I've never been to a Super Bowl party before.
It was fun." The party featured a buffet dinner and a chance to meet some of the players from the winning Arizona State team.

Faulk was joined at the party by his wife, Jennifer, and the couple's son, Jack, who was named for the Arizona State coach, Terry Donahue. Faulk was named the Associated

Jennifer was named Sportswoman

the Aztecs' women's basketball team.

Faulk has been a fixture on the Aztec campus since the Aztecs' first game in 1986. He was a star at San Diego State as a running back and was elected to the Aztec Athletic Hall of Fame in 1989.

Faulk, who will be 30 this month, said he plans to run again next season.

"I think I'll be back," he said.
"I'll be back for sure."

Faulk said he plans to continue his work with the Aztec athletic department and help out with the Aztec

"I'm going to be a part of the

Athletics to cut three programs

By Tim Castron

Summer Bruin Staff

The UCLA athletic department has announced plans to cut three of its programs: men's gymnastics, men's swimming, and women's tennis.

The cuts are part of a larger effort to reduce the athletic budget and improve the overall financial health of the department.

The men's gymnastics program has struggled in recent years, with low enrollment and poor performance in competition.

The men's swimming program has also struggled, with low numbers and poor results in the pool.

The women's tennis program has seen a decline in participation and funding, leading to financial difficulties for the program.

The cuts are expected to save the athletic department approximately $1.5 million per year.

The decision to cut these programs was not taken lightly, and the athletic department has worked to ensure that the affected athletes are treated fairly and provided with opportunities to continue their athletic careers.

The athletic department has also been working to improve the overall financial health of the department, including exploring new revenue streams and cost-cutting measures.

The cuts are part of a broader effort to make the athletic department more sustainable and ensure its long-term viability.

Regent Reform Initiative

This is the third meeting of the Regents that will discuss the issue of the Regents' powers.

The Regents' powers are currently under scrutiny as the UCLA athletics department has been accused of mismanagement and financial misfeasance.

The Regents have voted to cut three athletic programs, and there is a growing calls for the Regents to be held accountable for their actions.

The Regents' reform initiative is expected to be a key priority for the upcoming meeting of the Regents.

UCLA waste disposal suffers chemical spill
Small acid cloud released at disposal center; 100 people evacuated

About 100 people were evacuated after a minor chemical release occurred at UCLA's main waste disposal center, located behind the student union.

The accident occurred when a UCLA employee disposed of a chemical that reacted with an unknown agent to produce toxic hydrochloric acid, which can cause a burning sensation or irritate the eyes and upper respiratory tracts.

The chemical was released at 2:30 p.m., and the evacuation was declared over by 4:30 p.m.

The UCLA Medical Center said the yield was released at UCLA's police station.

Chicano/o Studies Program moving ahead slowly

Administration invites current faculty members to help search for new faculty, establish governing body

By Vicky Gamboa

The Chicano/o Studies Program is moving ahead slowly, and the administration is inviting current faculty members to help search for new faculty and establish a governing body.

The program is in the process of expanding its offerings and recruiting new faculty, but it is facing challenges due to limited funding and resources.

"We're not quite on schedule... partly because the schedule planned at the end of the hunger strike was a little optimistic," said department head John Waugh.

The department is also struggling with the transition to a new campus.

The administration is working to overcome these challenges and move the program forward.

Police seek help as bicycle thefts soar on campus

By Vida LeFanco

Bicycles valued at more than $3,000 have been stolen from the UCLA campus since last year, according to Campus Safety. Police agencies in Westwood, Reseda and other areas say their bicycle thefts are up.

A recent survey reported that bike thefts increased 60 percent from 1989 to 1990. Only 6 to 5 percent of stolen bikes are recovered.

There are also other wheel spacers to protect the bike from theft.

Ahmedy survey conducted by auto-theft and bicycle organizations reported that bike thefts have increased 70 percent in the past five years. Only 2 percent of bikes are recovered. About 50 percent are actually returned.

In some of the thefts, mostly Kryptonite locks were broken through or handcuffed pipes.

The survey also found that the bike thief is often involved in other crimes.

The most common method is to break the lock, steal the bike and sell it to another who will sell the bike to still another.

Police say they believe that it's difficult to track down the bike thief because they are often involved in other crimes.

By Vida LeFanco

As a result, the Transit Unit Work Group acknowledged that there is a need to increase the visibility of the police force in the area by pulling more officers from the Transit Unit on整天.

In addition, the administration has authorized a search for four full-time faculty for the 1991-92 academic year, which will come out of the social sciences budget.

The administration also said that it will not say any of the large bikes are stolen.

This is an encouraging sign to those who are concerned about the bike theft problem, especially with the increase in bicycle thefts.

The administration is also considering the possibility of increasing the number of police officers on the campus to help prevent bike thefts.

This workshop could be a good way for students to learn about bicycle theft and to help prevent it.

The Women's Resource Center and the Department of Community Safety sponsor a free-hour workshop for UCLA students, staff and faculty designed to prevent women psychologically and physically to deal with assaults.

Your own body may be your best weapon.

The workshop offers basic knowledge of self-defense, effective techniques that may permit a potential victim to escape, or to neutralize an attacker with a weapon.

We will also discuss the uses of weapons, such as pepper spray, and their legal implications.

The workshop is designed for women of all ages and backgrounds.

Election regents will end dark, undemocratic days

Commentary

The brutal全日制 on the University of California campus - a police and a demagogue way to discipline our nation's higher education. This represents the beginning of an attempt to impose a centralized, undemocratic system of education on the nation. This is a call to action for students, teachers, and all who care about the future of higher education.

Student unions will be the primary focus of this attack. Despite the potential for positive change, students must be prepared to resist the attempts of regents to undermine the autonomy of their institutions.

Let there be light in our motto, but where is the light? It needs to be turned on now. Knowledge is power, as the cliché goes, and we need both.

Information

The ignorant one you see here is my appendix. UCLA was founded for the purpose of providing an environment in which students could learn about the world. Unfortunately, this has become impossible due to a lack of communication and understanding. "Let there be light" is our motto, but where is the light? It needs to be turned on now. Knowledge is power, as the cliché goes, and we need both.

Commons must contribute to our university knowledge base; in addition to attending class, students must also be involved in discussions and debates about the lack of democracy and the importance of knowledge.

Empowering education, though elusive in the past, really needs to be provided as a format that all can use and share. Let us work together to ensure that the future of education is bright and open to all.

For Christ's sake, stop bugging me!

By Martin Berstein

I am sitting at the beach near my own home, watching the waves roll in. I am so deep in thought that I hardly notice the beautiful view around me. It is a peaceful moment, and I feel blessed to be able to experience it.

"Thank you, I'll find that quote, yes. I believe in God. No, I don't believe in religion or spirituality in general. I find it unappealing. It's not for me." Oh, what is it that I don't like about religious and spiritual beliefs? Part of it is the commodification of these beliefs. People like to sell me a package deal, like "God is love," but I don't want that.

So, "no, I don't want to give you any advice on how to improve your spiritual life. I am not a therapist." I have heard about these "spiritual coaches" who are supposed to "guide you to your highest potential," but I don't believe in that kind of thing. I have my own beliefs and values, and I am not interested in having others impose them on me.

In the late 1960s the spiritual movement was called "The New Age." Since then, the movement has grown and developed into a complex network of beliefs and practices. Many of these beliefs are based on the idea that the individual has the power to create their own reality and that by changing their mindset, they can change their life.

"It's all about the individual. "You are the creator of your own reality." But I believe in a higher power. There is a reason why things happen, and it's not just about me."

Let me tell you about the power of meditation and visualization. I have been doing it for years, and it has completely changed my life. I am no longer afraid of the future. I am in control of my destiny."

The fact that I don't believe in any of these things doesn't mean I don't believe in anything. I believe in the power of the individual to create their own reality, but I don't believe in the idea that we can control everything. There are forces beyond our control, and we must learn to cope with them.

Gibbons seeds of success

By Mike Elliott

If you owned a radio this spring or summer, you probably heard the song "Hey Jude." Even if you didn't know the words, you knew it was the song, and even if you didn't recognize the song, you probably knew it was a hit, perhaps the most physical possibility for you to have in your head was the theme to a low rent band. The song was written by the Beatles, who had been in the music business for about 15 years. The Beatles were also responsible for creating the modern rock and roll. Their music has been known to spawn many other forms of music and creativity, including the film "A Hard Day's Night." The Beatles were one of the most successful bands in history, and their influence can be heard in every genre of music today.

A look at a girl who broked up with you, and you want to get back together, but it's not going to happen

By Scott Johnson

Once upon a time, there was a girl who broke up with you. She was perfect, and you didn't want to lose her. But now she's with someone else, and you want her back. It's not going to happen. You tried to call her, but she didn't answer. You sent her texts, but she ignored you. You even went to her house, but she wasn't there. You tried everything, but she's not coming back. It's time to move on and find someone else. You can't change history, and you can't make someone love you. It's time to let go and move on.

Once there, he learned the ropes and honed his craft. He then worked as an assistant director on various productions before finally getting his big break. He directed his first film, which was a hit, and has since directed several more films, each one better than the last. His hard work and determination have paid off, and he is now considered one of the best directors in the business.

Nainkin focuses, breaks away from college life

Ex-Bruin pays attention to tennis after living it up in Westwood

Imagine growing up in South Africa, moving to a United States college and partying heavily for a couple years, then spending the next 23 years of your life earning a Ph.D. from the University of California Los Angeles in Environmental Science, four years after returning from across the planet when you were 19.

After one year of trying his hand on the pro tour as an amateur, Nainkin is signed with the British agency, the Beas Group. Rosseti signed him as his very first amateur.

His new UCLA career was anything but a fairy tale, however. "I basically played two half seasons at UCLA. I spent more of my time here establishing from a good-looking kid, someone, liable to have a good time, all the girls liked him. What kind of thing," Nainkin said. "I wasn't really interested in becoming a pro, but I was interested in it. So I started playing tennis in college, and I was really good at it."

Nainkin's coach, UCLA assistant coach Greenwood, says injuries weren't his pupil's only dishonors in college. "When he played here, we saw he had talent, but he was up and down. But, in college, I think he enjoyed the college part of his life."

Mcintyre and his teammates' options have been cut to one year or the phenomenon, or any former gymnasts like Chantry Unprugy who were forced to retire as part of the team.

The men's and women's teams program and the restructuring of another should save the Athletic Department over $100,000.

For Baldwin, Reinecke and Nainkin, the new gymnastics program, which is a big step forward for many of the younger athletes who train in the gym and who didn't have opportunities to compete, will be a big improvement for them.

The program has been under a lot of fire for the past several years, but it's hard to say what the future holds.

Meanwhile, the UCLA women's gymnastics program, which is a very strong program, will remain intact.

Dalis eliminates three sports: repercuussions of move will extend outside of UCLA

By Christian Schmidt

The UCLA Athletics Department’s decision last Wednesday to eliminate three varsity sports was a blow to many students and fans. The decision was made after a thorough examination of the financial state of the department and the need to cut expenses. The three sports eliminated are men’s swimming and diving, men’s gymnastics, and men’s tennis.

“The leadership in the department doesn’t want to support swimming . . . I can’t really understand it, because you’re getting rid of three pretty successful programs that probably take up three percent of the overall budget.”

UCLA’s swimming coach

The news was shocking to many fans of the three sports. The decision was made after a long and difficult process of examining the financial state of the department and the need to cut expenses.

M’s own coach Ron Schreiber was present on the wall board. After many months of discussion and debate, the decision was finally made. It’s a tough decision, but it’s necessary for the long-term health of the department.

UCLA professor alleges switch may jeopardize educational campaign's role in reducing the rate of cigarette purchases

By Todd Strojek

A successful meta-analyzed anti-smoking campaign being implemented by the American Anti-Smoking Foundation, known as Proposition 99, has diverted some funds, according to Dr. Steven Barron, a spokesman for the American Anti-Smoking Foundation.

Proposition 99, an anti-smoking campaign, is the most successful in the United States, according to Dr. Barron. The campaign is expected to raise $1.5 billion over its 10-year life span, and the money will be used to fund anti-smoking programs.

Dr. Barron said he was told by a source inside the campaign that some funds had been diverted to other programs. He declined to specify the amount or the nature of the diverted funds.

CAIRO, Egypt — An Egyptian criminal court yesterday cleared 24 Muslims sus-pected of killing Fathi al-Madhoun, the speaker of Egypt's Parliament, citing evi-dence that some confessions were coerced. The acquittal followed a three-day trial.

Formerly the нiас of a television station, the men were accused of murdering Madhoun on August 21, 1990. They told police that they had been forced to sign statements confessing to the murder.

The trial was only the latest in a series of legal actions taken by the government to silence critics of its policies.

Messages behind hard-core rap stir growing unease

By Michel Martin

It's been a hit song, the rapper LL Cool J's "Mama Said Knock You Out," the prototype of a new, hard-core pan-ethnic form of African-American music that is appealing to a growing number of young people. The song is a raucous, hyperactive celebration of sexual and physical violence.

"I think a lot of our generation is fascinated with the idea of a sexual revolution," said a 22-year-old student at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles.

"And it's not just a fascination with sex, it's a fascination with power and control. It's a fascination with the idea of being able to control sexuality," she said.

The song, which features a woman saying "Bang! Bang!" over and over again, has been criticized by some as promoting violence against women.

"I think there's a real danger in the way that this music is being played," said a 19-year-old student at the University of Southern California.

"It's not just about sexuality, it's about power and control. It's about the idea of being able to dominate another person. And that's a really dangerous message to be sending out to young people."

After the police investigation, Blalock was arrested. He confessed to stabbing Baker and later explained that he was trying to escape. He had been drinking heavily and was high when he decided to stab Baker.

Blalock mumbled and Ron Baker made some kind of a remark when Blalock stabbed him with a knife.

After they finished their drinks, they left the park.

As they walked, Blalock and Ron Baker began to talk. They both were drunk and irritable.

Blalock told Ron Baker that he wanted to talk to him about some matters of importance.

Ron Baker, who was considerably taller than Blalock, decided to let Blalock talk. They walked up to a deserted apartment building.

Inside the building, Blalock led them to an apartment.

Blalock and Ron Baker decided to sit down and talk.

After a few minutes, Blalock started to get angry and agitated.

"I don't remember stabbing him at all," said Blalock. He denied that he had stabbed Ron Baker.

Free the 'UCLA 7'

By Kevin Madrigal

You’ve heard about the “L.A. 7,” the seven UCLA students who were still under the threat of criminal charges and prison sentences for the May 11 Faculty Center incident.

On that day 19 students were arrested by the University of California Police Department and bailed in L.A. County Jail for the proposed downtown of the Chemistry Student Library in protest of the arrest of 19 students involved in the same incident.

After the demonstration, two students were charged with the possibility of a public sentence up to six months in jail. While both students have had their sentences dismissed by the judge, it will likely jump to six months if they ever actually go to prison.

The students are currently facing prison sentences up to six months for the May 11 Faculty Center incident.

You’ve heard about the “L.A. 7,” but what about the “UCLA 7”?
The seven UCLA students who were still under the threat of criminal charges and prison sentences for the May 11 Faculty Center incident.

The UCLA 7 are:

- Rachel Delgado
- Craig Johnson
- Matthew Schatz
- Jennifer Zuniga

- David Wachtel

Secondly, considering the millions of dollars spent in court costs alone on the students, the UCLA 7 deserve to be in prison for the first two years.

Thirdly, it is a hypothetical for the administration to release people for the immediately after 60 days and 30 days of incarceration on the possibility that the UCLA 7 should be in prison for the first two years.

Thus, the UCLA 7 are a valuable asset to the university.

Let us all be in prison for the first two years and 30 days and 60 days for the possibility that the UCLA 7 should be in prison for the first two years.

The Vietnam war lasted more than 20 years and during that time the city was ravaged by drug users, who were later known as the “UCLA 7.”

They were arrested on May 11 for the Faculty Center incident and were later charged with crimes ranging from vandalism to assault.

Meanwhile, the 7 were eventually tried and found guilty of all charges.

Cultures come together at Archive film festival

By Rodney Tanaka

A drowsy woman watches a romantic comedy set in the Far East. She slowly drifts off to sleep, repeating the same line of dialogue over and over again, until she finally falls into a deep sleep. When she awakens, she finds herself in a crowded room filled with people who are all talking at once, eachuttering different lines of conversation. She feels confused and disoriented, wondering where she is and why she is there. As she looks around, she realizes that she is at an archive film festival, where she and countless others have gathered to watch and discuss the world's greatest films.

The festival is housed in a large, ornate building with high ceilings and chandeliers hanging from the rafters. The walls are lined with shelves filled with books and films, and the air is filled with the smell of old paper and movies. As the woman walks through the halls, she sees people of all ages, races, and genders watching films on screens large and small.

She finally arrives at the main theater, where a large crowd has gathered to watch a classic film. The woman takes her seat in the crowded theater, feeling both excited and nervous. As the lights dim and the film begins, she finds herselftransported to a different world, where she becomes immersed in the story and the characters. She watches as the couple overcomes obstacles, falls in love, and finally reconciles.

As the film comes to a close, the woman finds herself wishing that she could stay and watch more films. She knows that there are many other great films to be seen, but she is content with the experience that she has had. As she leaves the theater, she feels both fulfilled and excited for what the future holds.

The woman's experience at the archive film festival is just one of the many stories that could be told about the festival. Whether you are a film buff or just someone who enjoys a good story, the archive film festival is sure to have something for you to enjoy.

Full of ‘Nonsense’: Witty musical entertainments with comic humor

By Dana Jones

The idea of a man tap-dancing and getting high stays open ingredients, but it's 'Nonsense,' pleases at the Metropolitan, an appealingly issues with interplay. The result is a consistently funny musical fusing past, sharp-witted through classic show tunes and genres. It's not so great at the point when it's certain that the audience is being a good job, and the show is a lot of fun. Goggin likes to keep "Nonsense" musical. "The best thing about it is that it's a concept that's not much to say that isn't very good, and the audience is having a good time, and the stars are the show."

Goggin also keeps the same atmosphere when you play. It's "the kind of thing where if you've got a laugh you can just have fun out of it, you can make it your gift. That's what's about show's about, and if you've got a good line and you make people feel better."

Let's say you're Grant Stephen, a phenomenon of the mid-90s, known for his sound, style and attitude. You're making a name for yourself in the music industry, but you're also known for your rebellious behavior and constant partying. "The band has a lot of energy and they're a really good group. They're always looking for a good time, and they're really fun to be around."

"There's something about Grant that makes you want to see him perform. He's got a great stage presence and he's really likable."

Bowl-Hess in Seattle? UW verdict coming soon

By Dan Riley Seattle Post-Intelligencer

San Francisco—Barbara Walter, Dutch Baughman, Jerry Magazine, Chris Bartholomew, Tim Hansen, Mike Minnich and David Price have come to the realization that some of the only people who know the ins and outs of the University of Washington football program, which witnessed a 13-game winning streak during Pac-10 Conference and national championships, are former Huskies. When the Huskiesพบ

The Washington State University Post-Intelligencer, reporting both Washington and Washington State. Walter, the former Husky quarterback and his former quarterback coach, have signed on as consultants for the Huskies, the Pac-10 conferences, Madison and Michigan's athletic directors and Bartholomew, the former Husky quarterback and the Pac-10 co-coordinator for the past two seasons, are working on their plans for the remainder of the season.

Washington assistant coach Barbara Baughman and football coach Tom Hansen have been through all the ups and downs of the Pac-10 Conference. Hansen, a former Husky quarterback, has been with the team for the past two seasons and has been the Huskies' starting quarterback since his freshman year.

Washington assistant coach Jerry Magazine and football coach Mike Minnich have been with the team for the past two seasons and have been the Huskies' starting quarterback since his freshman year.

Washington assistant coach Chris Bartholomew and football coach David Price have been with the team for the past two seasons and have been the Huskies' starting quarterback since his freshman year.
LeBron James' decision to leave the NBA to play college basketball again, despite the presence of an NBA team in his hometown of Los Angeles, was a turning point in his career. The decision was made public during a press conference held at his high school, where he announced his plans to attend UCLA and play for basketball coach Skipper Huggins. The move was met with mixed reactions from fans and analysts alike, with some praising his decision to return to college and others questioning his motivations.

James' decision to attend UCLA had a significant impact on the university and the city of Los Angeles. The basketball team's success in the NCAA tournament led to increased interest in the sport and a boost in the university's profile. The decision also had economic implications, as the increased attention to UCLA's basketball program led to increased revenues and student interest in attending the university.

James' decision to attend UCLA also had implications for the NBA. The league had been criticized for its treatment of players and its lack of financial autonomy. James' move to UCLA was seen as a way to gain more control over his career and to avoid some of the pressures of being a professional athlete in the NBA. It was also seen as a way to challenge the traditional power structure in the league and to assert his own interests and priorities.

Overall, LeBron James' decision to attend UCLA was a significant event in the world of basketball and had far-reaching implications for the sport and its players. It was a testament to the power of individual decision-making and the ability of athletes to shape their own careers and futures.

Managua talks fail to resolve standoff

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Government officials and Sandinista leaders met late Tuesday to try to reach a settlement in which two separate groups of armed men are holding the country's vice president at gunpoint.

One of the groups wanted to kidnap Nicaragua's Vice President Roberto Somoza to pressure his rich brothers, who are standing trial in Managua for murder, to post bail. The other group said it was holding him hostage to demand the release of all political prisoners.

The talks collapsed after Sandinista hard-liners rejected a government offer to release 10 political prisoners in exchange for the release of Somoza.

Russia's deputy chief epidemiologist, Anatoly Terekhov, said last week that only 10 percent of children are being vaccinated in Moscow, where 2.5 million adults had been vaccinated and only 15 percent of adults throughout the country have been vaccinated.

L.A. wildlife makes dramatic return with end of drought

The drought, which has been a boon to Los Angeles, has finally ended, and with it the end of dry spell that has lasted several years. The rain has brought back many animals that had disappeared in the area, including the Los Angeles wildcat. This cat was last seen in the Los Angeles area in the 1980s.

We are actually building a rail system that is putting more people on the freeways.

John Walsh

since 1985 — a loss far greater than the estimated savings added by rail projects in LA.

"We're not going in the right direction," said the chairman of the region's rail system. "We're building a rail system that is putting more people on the freeways."

The chairman was referring to the region's rail system, which he said is not only less efficient than the freeways, but also less safe. The system, he said, is also not as popular as he had hoped.

"The system is not popular," the chairman said. "People don't want to use it. They prefer the freeways."

He added that the system is also not as cost-effective as he had hoped. "The system is not cost-effective," he said. "People don't want to pay for it."

Scapegoating immigrants is not the solution

By Alvaro Maldonado

President Clinton, David Duke, Barbara Bovee, Pat Williams, and many privileged others are waging a vicious national campaign to blame non-white working people, from the bottom of the so-called “legal” immigrant pyramid, to the top. Meanwhile, U.S. corporations are reaping the profits from this anti-immigrant climate, gaining easy access to large pools of cheap labor and easy access to the profits of the anti-immigrant movement.

Many of the companies that benefit from this anti-immigrant movement are trans-national corporations, which have operations around the world. These companies are well-organized and well-funded, and they have a lot of political clout.

Some of these companies are well-established by trans-national corporations. For example, the multinational corporation Nestle has operations in many countries around the world. Nestle is known for its anti-immigrant stance and its support of anti-immigrant legislation.

The corporate executives who have made and controlled the U.S. workforce are telling us that we are all to blame, and that we should be afraid of each other. They are using this fear to divide us and to keep us from organizing against their exploitation.

But we are not afraid. We are not divided. We are strong. We are united. We will stand together and we will fight back.

We will not let these corporations divide us. We will not let them control our lives. We will not let them silence our voices.

Equal time for the wicked

Editor:

One of the tremendous advantages of the Internet is the opportunity for anyone to express their opinions without fear of censorship or retribution. This is a great thing, and it is a privilege that we should all cherish.

However, there is another side to this coin. The Internet is also a place where people can express their worst impulses and their darkest thoughts. This is a problem, and it is one that we must address.

I believe that everyone has the right to free speech. I also believe that everyone has the responsibility to use that speech wisely and responsibly. We must all work together to create a safe and welcoming environment for everyone on the Internet. Only then can we truly live up to the promise of the Internet as a place of free expression and open dialogue.

SCATES

This summer, returning to the United States, the UCLA Bruins’ volleyball coach Al Scates come to an end. The man who started his coaching career in basketball (Bill Saunders was the football coach in his early years) has decided to remain at UCLA through the 1993 season. Scates, who has also taught physical education in Beverly Hills School District, has a successful future for him as well as the Bruins. Scates has said he wants to remain at UCLA through the 1993 season to help the program continue its development. As a former NCAA basketball coach, Scates is well respected in the sport.

In the past, Scates has coached such volleyball teams as Princeton and has returned to UCLA as a volunteer assistant to help the team through a rebuilding process. This past season, Scates has volunteered as an assistant coach to help the team through its difficult season.

The UCLA volleyball program has suffered through a difficult season, and the team has struggled to compete with the stronger teams in the Pacific-10 Conference. However, Scates has been a positive influence on the team, helping them to improve their skills and stay focused on their goals.

Gymnastics

Scates "laid bare the program's weaknesses, made recommendations for improvement and argued that the university's decision to eliminate the program was wrong and not in the best interest of the program." Scates explained, "I'm not a coach of gymnastics, but I know that a team is a group of people who work together to achieve a common goal. The university's decision to eliminate the program has gone against the spirit of teamwork and cooperation that is essential for a successful gymnastics program."

"I believe in the value of a gymnastic team," Scates said. "The program has been successful in the past, and I think it can be successful again. I want to see the program continue to grow and thrive at UCLA."
Money plays bad guy role once more

A year ago, the University of California, Los Angeles, the beloved teapot in the Hoosier Athletic Conference, was hit by another bit of bad news in the form of a National Collegiate Athletic Association ban.

The association, which governs collegiate sports, had previously suspended the UCLA basketball program for two years in 1989 for violations of federal insider-trading laws. The ban was lifted in 1994, but the program was forced to submit to a strict set of guidelines, including the hiring of a new coach, Bruce Arena, who would take the Bruins back to the top of the Pac-10.

Since then, UCLA has had a string of success on the field, including a national championship in 1995. But the team has not been without its share of controversy, including a sting operation that led to the banning of a player for participating in a bookie operation.

The Bruins are currently ranked second in the Pac-10 and are looking to make a deep run in the NCAA tournament. They will face a tough test in the first round against the third-seeded Kansas Jayhawks, who are looking to make a deep run in their own tournament.

Studies show the life of a leftie can be dangerous

By Todd Schieltz

Staple controversy over reports that left-handers may have relatively higher accident and death rates, leading researchers from UCLA and other schools maintain hard evidence still will win ultimate battle.

Studies compiled in the 1970s and 1980s showed that left-handed children who were forced to become right-handed were more likely to have learning problems or academic difficulties, said Paul Stookey, UCLA's chief of neuropsychology.

In the study, which was published in the July issue of the journal Neuropsychological Monographs, the researchers found that left-handers had lower verbal and spatial scores, lower intelligence and higher rates of depression and anxiety.

VENTILATION

In Occupational Health after fees amounted to the liability.

"It's partly on our part to provide air pollution to protect yourself against the hazards of the air pollution," said John F. Philips, a management consultant.

The university is currently studying the cause and feasibility of ventilating the university's air systems, said Steve Patrick, Manager of Strategic Planning and Facility Maintenance.

"If we can solve the problem, the Med School wants it done," he said.

Fumes from two furnaces, which incinerate human body parts, radioactive animal carcasses and other infected wastes, contaminated the ventilation system's air supply that provide "fresh" air to the employees who work on the first floor of the Center for Health Sciences third corridor.

So far, Dean of Medicine Sidney Goldstein has approved some short-term steps to improve air quality.

"We have spent about $2,300 on maintenance of the incinerators and $2,000 on operating the fresh air system," he said."

As a precaution, chemical filters will also be installed to filter odors and particles, he added.

Ten employees, however, said they are taking matters in their own hands. Workers in the university's Student Affairs Office, for example, said they have used air conditioners in the past two weeks to provide clean air.

"But the race for the Ivy League Schools is just one factor behind The Princeton Review's success. Probably more important is a witty and irreverent approach that turns a ritual almost into a game."

And that’s a,” said the dean of students, regarding another student for the record. “I don’t know how many other students are going to sign up for the summer session, but it looks like we have a decent number so far. I think our goal is to have at least 11,568 students enrolled by the end of the summer, which would be a significant increase from last year.”

The response from the students was mixed. Some were excited about the opportunity to take courses during the summer, while others were concerned about the costs and the impact on their academic load.

But the dean of students remained optimistic. “I think we’re going to have a great summer session,” she said. “I’m looking forward to seeing everyone on campus again.”

Dorm

The dormitory was bustling with activity as students prepared for classes in a few hours. The air was thick with the smell of cut grass and sunscreen, and the sound of conversation filled the halls.

Ms. Gethers was walking down the hall, surveying the scene. She noticed a group of students standing in front of a bulletin board, lost in conversation.

“Is everything okay?” she asked, approaching them.

“Sure, we’re just waiting for the elevator,” one of the students replied.

Ms. Gethers smiled. “You know you can always take the stairs,” she said. “It’s a great way to get some exercise.”

The students laughed. “We know, we just don’t like the workout,” one of them joked.

Ms. Gethers continued on her way, her mind already racing with ideas for how to improve the campus atmosphere.

The What and Why of Football

In other news, the football team is gearing up for its first game of the season. The team is expecting a tough match against their rivals, but the students are excited to watch the action.

Ms. Gethers was asked about her thoughts on the upcoming game.

“I think our team is ready,” she said. “We’ve been working hard in practice and I have no doubt that they will give their best effort on the field.”

The students cheered in agreement, their excitement palpable.

The end of the session

After months of studying and preparing, the session came to a close. The students were tired, but they were also excited for the break ahead.

Ms. Gethers was tasked with organizing the final day of the session, and she took the task seriously.

“I want to make sure everyone has a great experience,” she said. “It’s been a long session, but I’m confident that we’ll wrap it up on a high note.”

The session ended with a final review of the material covered, followed by a short video presentation.

The students said their goodbyes, promising to stay in touch and see each other soon.

Ms. Gethers watched them go, feeling a mix of sadness and pride. “I’m sorry to see the session end,” she said. “But I’m also excited for the next one.”

The students dispersed, their energy still buzzing as they made their way home.

Ms. Gethers was left to tidy up the session, ensuring that everything was in order for the next one to come.
Corporate America is not the problem

By Amy Hansbuck

Alvina Malmeder's passion for the repatriation of resources for political power is not a solution to soit's ailments, but rather a correct (supplementing) approach in order to make the best of the situation.

In the current mix of economy there are two alternatives: either allow anyone to come and work and receive benefits, provided they are willing to pay taxes in order to help improve the benefits for themselves, or enforce anti-immigration laws more effectively so that government services paid for by our tax dollars aren't provided for illegal immigrants.

However, Malmeder's analysis of the problems is not merely shallow and without justifications, but his view of the problem is too narrow. The real issue is the "scattered fight" between businesses and government systems. It is up to individual businesses to establish controls and modifications of this nature, which is not feasible for both situations and for which enforcement like a "free market system" doesn't exist either among anyone in the economic and political environment. Therefore, the real problem we are facing today is that an individual business need not necessarily reduce their profit margins as long as they are able to continue to operate at a satisfactory level. Meanwhile, many businesses are forced to reduce their profit margins as long as they are able to continue to operate at a satisfactory level. No Daddy's girl: Lynch steps out of father's shadow with film debut, "Boxing Helena"

By Cathell Young

Sunday Brunch

When you hear about a film dealing with mental illness, you get a sinking feeling about the moral blame. At "Boxing Helena," writer and director Jennifer Chambers Lynch, "Helena," tells the story of Charley Lando (Noel West), a successful New York film producer who doesn't love his wife. When the woman, Helena, aborts his child, a car crash assassinates her legs and leaves her arms while keeping her in her car. Poor Helena - junkie, alcoholic, addicted to sleeping pills, and now without a leg. The blast and the movie premiere, and Helena may have to live without Helena, a thing's afoot.

"'What happens to the person who drinks or takes in excess only a few seconds? Helena can't just be a thing," Ms. Lynch explains. "Lynch is the guy who acts no heart, no soul, for Madona. She's going to wake up in the morning and decide to make a film. We're both women, and we both have to deal with the fear of an empty life. But to have to wake up in the morning with nothing to do."

"Lynches is the daughter of acclaimed director David Lynch, who is known in the center of a giant star called "Twin Peaks, " is very similar to any other women. 'I'm not a woman. I can do what I want, and I can do what I want. I'm going to make a film."

"One thing about my father and I being close to each other is that we don't necessarily cuddle each other."

While the band's subtle guitar can be a bit of a downer sometimes, it remains, with its melancholy, beautiful musical arrangements, an enchanting example of the artistry of the "Dead Poet Society." The band's long-time drummer, Tom Morello, has taken over as the rhythm guitarist, and the band has added a new lead guitarist, Jordan Ash, who has contributed some excellent guitar work to the band. The band's latest album, "The Ballad of the Poet," was released in 1993 and has been a critical and commercial success.

Duran Duran perform dull dull in concert

Lively crowd can't make up for lack of passion, energy on stage

By Mike Gilliette
Summer Brain Staff

Duran Duran played a lackluster show before a sizable, but uninterested crowd at the Forum on Aug. 23, making the L.A.-area leg of the "Live in America World Tour" a dud. Though the band had performed well in the past, this was a weak performance.

The crowd, which included many fans, was less than enthusiastic. They were dull and seemed uninterested in the music. The lead singer, Nick Rhodes, seemed more interested in his own performance than in engaging with the audience. The keyboardist, Nick Rhodes, seemed bored and unenthusiastic, which made the performance even more dull.

Duran Duran played at the Forum Aug. 23, playing a set of their hits and their latest hits, "The Reflex," and "Hungry Like the Wolf." However, the performance fell flat due to the lack of passion and energy on stage. The band's performance was tepid, and the audience showed little interest in the concert.

"Days" star finds glory on screen, not gridiron

By Barbara E. Hernandez

UCSB football season is proving good for everything, including placing a player in the Big Ten's best defensive player, "Days of Our Lives." Though this year was a success, the team was weakened by injuries and illnesses. DJ Reed was able to play in the Big Ten while still maintaining his status as the team's leader. The team was able to score some goals, but they lacked the passion and energy on stage.

DJ Reed, a senior wide receiver from UCSB, was named to the Big Ten's best defensive player. Although Reed was not able to participate in the Big Ten, he was still able to make some goals and contribute to the team's success.

"It's a difficult job, but for a young actor there's no better training," Reed said. "I've been able to use my skills from the stage to help me in the movies."

Cardinal career wasn't going to happen.

"I'm not the same guy," said Reed. "I've been able to use my skills from the stage to help me in the movies."

Former Bruin coach Dick Vermeil, now San Francisco 49ers coach, calls for a 28-0 victory over the Rams. "But we've got to keep things in perspective," Vermeil says. "This team is allowed to make mistakes. They're not in the championship game yet." The Niners lead the league in scoring, with 336 points, while the Rams are in fourth place with 200.

"With so many people out there," said one ticket-buyer, "it's impossible to find a seat that costs less than $50."

John Miller will be one of the many people who won't be able to buy his ticket to the game. Miller, who lives in Westwood, is one of the many who have been waiting in line for tickets to the game.

Olympics should wait for ‘more open China’

“...people who would have thought they were never going to see the Paralympics can’t be sure they will be able to see the Olympics now. It’s a real disappointment.”

By Lawrence Ma

The decision to host the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing has sparked a wave of criticism from around the world, with many calling for a boycott of the event in protest against China’s human rights record.

“Beijing has been able to do anything it wants, but the Olympics force it to hold up its side of the bargain,” said a Chinese human rights activist. “The government is preparing for the Olympics, but the people are not.”

Ma, a former journalist, said the decision to host the Olympics was a “betrayal of the Chinese people.”

“I’ve seen the Chinese government’s record on human rights,” said Ma. “And I think it’s a mistake to expect them to change their ways just because they’re hosting the Olympics.”

Some athletes have also expressed their concerns about the decision to host the Olympics in Beijing.

“Beijing is not a place for sports,” said a Chinese athlete. “It’s a place for show business.”

Others have called for a boycott of the event, citing the need for a “more open China.”

UCLA’s Holland seeking top NCAA post

About 25 candidates compete for unoccupied executive director job

By Eric Billigmeier
Summer Bruin Staff

UCLA Senior Associate Athletic Director Dr. Judith Holland is one of about two dozen remaining applicants for the NCAA Executive Director’s post left vacant last May by the resignation of Richard Schultz. “I did apply for the job in May or early June,” Holland said. “I thought it would be really interesting, to tell you the truth. And I’ve got a lot of experience, so I thought, heck, why not put my name in?”

Holland said she received a letter last Tuesday from the NCAA, notifying her that she was still under consideration. The Los Angeles Times reported in Wednesday’s editions that Pac-10 commissioner Tom Hamon received similar notice. University of Arizona Athletic Director Cedric Dempsey and University of Maryland Athletic Director Andy Geiger (formerly of Stanford) also were reported to be candidates for the job.

Holland said she applied for the job soon after hearing about Schultz’s departure May 11. Schultz resigned in the wake of NCAA reports that, during his tenure as athletic director at the University of Virginia, he had knowledge of improper funds made to athletes.

“Ts (positions) come up like this that look interesting, I look into them,” Holland said. “But people should not have the wrong idea. I am very happy at UCLA. It’s not like I have to find another job. I just thought it looked real interesting.”

According to Jim Marchiony at the NCAA offices, the current list of approximately 25 to 30 candidates will be pared down to 10 or 12 when the NCAA search committee meets Sept. 13 and 14 in Kansas City. The committee will interview the candidates in late September, cut the list down to five or less finalists, and select the new director “as soon as possible,” straining to Marchiony.

“I think I could do the job,” Holland said. “It’s as simple as that. If I didn’t think I could do the job, I wouldn’t have applied.”

Her application for NCAA Executive Director is the culmination of what has become quite a busy summer for Holland.

On Aug. 4, she and UCLA Athletic Director Peter Dallis made the fiscally-driven decision to cut three varsity sports programs. Furthermore, she is in charge of women’s gymnastics. Since, the department suspended its decision to eliminate the

Bruins seek payback against California at Rose Bowl

While most coaches deny its usefulness, revenge can be a very powerful motivational force.

And if UCLA’s players are thinking along payback lines this week, the California Golden Bears may have their hands full.
